

Top 10 Reasons to Study Away

Learn a language...

Immersion is one of the most successful ways to learn a language or to improve existing language skills.

Learn about yourself...

New situations, new people, and new surroundings will present opportunities and challenges. The ways in which you handle these new experiences will help you learn more about yourself.

Increase your employability...

Employers are particularly impressed with students who have taken the extra step to go abroad and learn in new ways, especially students who are studying business.

Expand your worldview...

There is no better way to broaden your perspective on the world than to actually be in another country and interact with other students who each have something different to offer.

Get a new domestic perspective...

Your international experiences will likely help you to look at issues in a new way back in the U.S.

Meet new people...

You will meet students from your host country as well as other international students. These friendships can be lifelong and provide you with numerous opportunities for the future.

Gain independence...

You will see the many things you are capable of doing on your own, all while in a foreign country!

Take a break from your academic routine...

A different academic system and opportunities to take different courses are just a couple of ways to change up the monotony.

Immerse yourself in the culture...

You won't just be a tourist seeing the sights, but actually living the local culture.

...you'll have the time of your life!

You will see new places, try new things, eat new foods, make new friends, and have more fun than you can imagine!
